Tre Lovell of The Lovell Firm, a prestigious, Century City-based law firm, has been named to the "Top 50 Litigation Trailblazers," a national ranking of the most elite trial lawyers by The National Law Journal. The annual list honors leading individuals who have changed the practice of litigation through the use of innovative legal strategies.

With over 20 years of experience, Mr. Lovell represents individuals and companies in a variety of business and entertainment matters, ranging from complex, multiple plaintiff litigation to high-exposure media cases. In accord with his fearless litigation style, the National Law Journal noted his work on large-scale fraud and Ponzi scheme cases where he recently represented a large group of over a hundred and forty victims, including vulnerable retirees, in a $200 million international real estate scam spanning over 5 countries. Lovell is also nationally recognized for representing Daun Slagle, the only survivor of serial killer Keith Jesperson, in a major Hollywood defamation suit against A&E Television Networks and Lifetime Movie Network for inaccurate depiction in the Lifetime original movie Happy Face Killer.

According to The National Law Journal, "Each of the professionals recognized has promoted significant change in the way cases are litigated through the use of inventive defense techniques or technologies; by bringing unique types of cases to court; executing novel litigation approaches; and/or by establishing new approaches to billing."
